Message from the Director

In 1985, a group of committed leaders at the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS), convened by then HHS Secretary Margaret M. Heckler, documented a startling and growing public health concern - the significant extent of health disparities among the nation's racial and ethnic minority groups. These inequalities unnecessarily claimed the lives of 60,000 Americans each year, which Secretary Heckler called "an affront both to our ideals and to the ongoing genius of American medicine."

Their first-ever comprehensive federal study of minority health was released that same year. The Report of the Secretary's Task Force on Black and Minority Health (also known as the Heckler Report), marked the beginning of a new era to improve minority health, beginning with the creation of the HHS Office of Minority Health in 1986. Recommended actions for reducing racial and ethnic health disparities and the work that followed helped lay the groundwork for monumental changes in policy, programs, research, data and legislation, and continue to influence transformative action today, such as the landmark Affordable Care Act.

Over the past three decades, we have made important strides in addressing health disparities. However, despite our nation's progress, racial and ethnic minorities still experience worse health status and outcomes than non-Hispanic whites. And that means that our work is not done. This year, as we commemorate the 30th anniversary of the HHS Office of Minority Health, we have an unprecedented opportunity to continue reshaping the health of our nation. Together, we can accelerate momentum toward reducing disparities in health and health care and advancing health equity.

We can accelerate the momentum created by the Affordable Care Act to provide access to affordable, quality coverage and care to millions of Americans, including millions of people of color. We can accelerate the progress made through the HHS Action Plan to Reduce Racial and Ethnic Health Disparities to promote integrated approaches and promising practices to reduce health disparities. And through the National Partnership for Action to End Health Disparities and its National Stakeholder Strategy for Achieving Health Equity, we can accelerate health equity in every community across the nation working with our dedicated partners.

The HHS Office of Minority Health is pleased to bring you this special 30th anniversary edition of the Pocket Guide to Minority Health Resources, which is available to you both in print and online for the first time in its production history. Over the years, the Pocket Guide has been a valued resource to community organizations; public health; health care and social services professionals; institutions of higher education; advocates; and consumers in sharing knowledge and building partnerships to tackle the most challenging of issues around health disparities. We hope this guide will continue to support the work you do in communities to promote health and well-being.

Throughout this year and beyond, we look forward to working with you to continue to advance health equity for all Americans.

Sincerely,

J. Nadine Gracia, MD, MSCE
Deputy Assistant Secretary for Minority Health
Director, Office of Minority Health

Services

OFFICE OF MINORITY HEALTH

Who we are

The HHS Office of Minority Health was created in 1986 to improve the health of racial and ethnic minority populations through the development of health policies and programs that will help eliminate health disparities.

Our strategic priorities include:

- Support the development and implementation of the provisions of the Affordable Care Act that address disparities and equity. By improving access to affordable, quality health care for all Americans, the Affordable Care Act is helping to reduce health disparities, bring down health care costs, promote prevention and wellness, and give individuals and families more control over their own care.
- Lead the implementation of the HHS Action Plan to Reduce Racial and Ethnic Health Disparities. The HHS Action Plan to Reduce Racial and Ethnic Health Disparities outlines goals and actions HHS is taking to reduce health disparities among racial and ethnic minorities. The Office of Minority Health is leading the charge to put the HHS Disparities Action Plan into practice across HHS agencies and offices.

- Coordinate the National Partnership for Action to End Health Disparities (NPA) and the National Stakeholder Strategy for Achieving Health Equity. NPA reaches out to the grassroots level to mobilize a nationwide, comprehensive, community-driven and sustained approach toward combating health disparities. The National Stakeholder Strategy for Achieving Health Equity provides a common set of goals and objectives for public and private sector partnerships to help racial and ethnic minorities and underserved groups reach their full health potential.

Why we exist

Racial and ethnic minorities – including Blacks and African Americans, Hispanics/Latinos, American Indians and Alaska Natives, Asian Americans, Native Hawaiians, and Pacific Islanders – continue to experience worse health status and outcomes than non-Hispanic whites in the United States. Minorities are less likely to get the preventive care needed to stay healthy, less likely to receive quality care, and more likely to suffer from serious illnesses and higher rates of death across many health conditions.

Health disparities among racial and ethnic minorities are often linked to social, economic or environmental disadvantages, such as poverty, lack of access to high quality education, unemployment, unhealthy housing, unsafe neighborhoods, and lack of affordable transportation options. These conditions are known as the social determinants of health.

The HHS Office of Minority Health's programs, policies and practices address such factors, with the goal of affording minority communities an opportunity to live a long, healthy and productive life, and to improve the overall quality of health for minority populations.

What we do

The HHS Office of Minority Health addresses disease prevention, health promotion, risk reduction, healthier lifestyle choices, use of health care services, and barriers to health care for racial and ethnic minorities. Core functions to implement our mission include:

- Increasing awareness and understanding of the major health problems and needs of racial and ethnic minorities and the nature and extent of health disparities;
- Promoting the collection of health data by racial and ethnic categories and strengthening infrastructures for data collection;

- Establishing and strengthening networks, coalitions, and partnerships to identify and solve health problems and concerns affecting racial and ethnic minorities;
  - Developing and promoting policies, programs, and practices to reduce health disparities and achieve health equity;
  - Fostering research, scientific investigations, and evaluation of interventions aimed at improving the health of racial and ethnic minorities; and
  - Funding demonstration programs at the national, regional, state, tribal, territorial and local levels to determine model approaches, promising practices and program and intervention effectiveness to improve minority health and reduce health disparities.

Regional staff: OMH is supported in the field by Regional Minority Health Consultants (RMHC) at each of the 10 HHS Regional Offices, who help build regional networks of consumers and professionals working on minority health.

Funding and programs: In addition, OMH provides funding in support of efforts to reduce racial and ethnic health disparities and advance health equity to state offices of minority health, multicultural health, and health equity; community- and faith-based organizations; institutions of higher education; tribes and tribal organizations; and other organizations dedicated to improving health.

Culturally and linguistically appropriate services: OMH is committed to culturally and linguistically appropriate services (CLAS) that ensure the needs of minority communities are integrated and addressed within health-related services and programs across the nation. Developed by OMH, the National Standards for Culturally and Linguistically Appropriate Services in Health and Health Care (National CLAS Standards) aim to improve quality, advance health equity, and help eliminate health disparities by establishing a blueprint for organizations to serve the nation's increasingly diverse individuals and communities. For information and resources on culturally and linguistically appropriate services, visit OMH's Think Cultural Health website at www.ThinkCulturalHealth.hhs.gov.

Office of Minority Health Resource Center (OMHRC): OMHRC is a one-stop source for minority health literature, research and referrals for consumers, community organizations and health professionals. As the nation's largest repository of information on health issues specific to racial and ethnic minorities, OMHRC offers a variety of information resources, from access to online document collections to database searches to customized responses to requests for information and technical assistance. OMHRC supports the mission and work of the Office of Minority Health.

Agency Offices of Minority Health and National Institute on Minority Health and Health Disparities at HHS

The Affordable Care Act (ACA) required the establishment of Offices of Minority Health within six agencies of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS): Agency for Healthcare Research and Quality (AHRQ), Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services (CMS), Food and Drug Administration (FDA), Health Resources and Services Administration (HRSA), and Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA). The law also reauthorized and strengthened the authorities of the HHS Office of Minority Health, as well as redesignated the National Center on Minority Health and Health Disparities to a NIH Institute – the National Institute on Minority Health and Health Disparities (NIMHD).

These offices and institute join the HHS Office of Minority Health to lead and coordinate activities that improve the health of racial and ethnic minority populations, reduce health disparities, and advance health equity.
